Contents

Editorial Comment .................................................................................. 3

A process-driven approach for identifying Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander learners of English as an Additional Language or Dialect (EAL/D) ......................................................... 4
Claire Gorman and Renae O’Hanlon

Coming to grips with grammar .................................................................... 7
Robyn English

Souping it up with grammar ...................................................................... 9
Ruth French

Early literacy is more than phonics ......................................................... 12
David Hornsby and Lorraine Wilson

Setting up for spelling success – Ten tips for thoughtful learning .... 16
Christine Topfer

Using mode to explicitly teach about oral language .............................. 19
Kerry Balzarolo

The potential of poetry for early literacy learning: Why, how and what? ................................................................. 21
Sandra Lennox

Using Yoko to develop knowledge about language .............................. 25
Ruth French

Motivating students for writing ............................................................... 27
Louise Dempsey

Using self-selected literature to teach reading: Inspiring engagement and deep thinking .......................................................... 29
Mitchell Parker

Struggling readers: A complex label ...................................................... 33
Gloria Latham

Ten activities for teaching and learning language ............................... 36
Phillip Poulton and Linda Willis

Text, Twitter and Tweet ............................................................................. 40
Sharon McDonough

Text Talk for Teachers .............................................................................. 41